WOODEN CROSS

CROSS OF NAILS

COVENTRY CROSSES

- The wooden cross and the cross of nails were created after the cathedral was bombed during the Coventry Blitz of World War II. The cathedral stonemason, Jock Forbes, saw two wooden beams lying in the shape of a cross and tied them together. A replica of the wooden cross built in 1964 has replaced the original in the ruins of the old cathedral on an altar of rubble. The original is now kept in St. Michael's Hall below the new cathedral.
- Cross of nails: Another cross was made of three nails from the roof truss of the old cathedral by Provost Richard Howard of Coventry Cathedral. It was later transferred to the new cathedral, where it rests on its altar. The cross of nails has become a symbol of peace and reconciliation across the world. There are over 160 Cross of Nails Centres all over the world, all of them bearing a cross made of three nails from the ruins, similar to the original one.

HEREFORD Mappa Mundi

- The Hereford World Map, made in around 1300, is recognised by UNESCO as an exceptionally important cultural artefact. It shows us how medieval people saw the physical world around them; perhaps more importantly, it also reveals how they perceived it culturally and spiritually.

- Over 1,000 inscriptions and almost as many painted scenes and symbolic decorations combine to create a strange and unfamiliar world: a world in which France is below the Red Sea, where Jerusalem occupies the exact centre and where a rhinoceros is as likely or unlikely an animal as a unicorn. The map is also an exquisite object in its own right: a work of beauty, artistry and skill. It is a bestiary, psalter, Bible, history of the world and collection of travellers' tales in one. Now it is available for you to own in a new reproduction from The Folio Society, limited to 1,000 numbered copies.
